

COMMON ENGAGEMENT

ADAM VENG

Adam is a Social Anthropologist from the University of Copenhagen, collaborating with Danish Common Housing company 'AKB København', administering 78 housing areas in Copenhagen. Through ethnographic fieldwork, archival research, and participatory action research methods he focuses on how integral ideals of the Danish common housing movement such as 'citizens democracy', 'participation' and 'engagement' traverse from housing company level over local housing areas to the daily lived experiences of tenants. In his work, Adam will develop methods for mapping the relation between formal and informal tenant communities and collaborate with SUMO architect David Tapias in co-creating concrete architectural prototypes with residents; both serving to develop innovative insights into the potentials of citizen-driving urban development from "below".
